BACKGROUND

Ian joined OCM in 2015 after more than 30 years consulting experience with Deloitte Touche Tohmatsu and his own consultancy. Prior to joining Deloitte, Ian worked in Commonwealth and State Government departments as well as private enterprise.

Major projects have included IT strategies for State Government departments, process reviews and redesign, post-implementation reviews and management of major projects for a variety of clients.

Ian has been a member of the Tasmanian Government Probity Advisers panel since its inception in 1999 and has completed in excess of 350 probity engagements. As a result, he has extensive experience in the review of a wide range of procurements involving a variety of methods and contractual models.

SKILLS AND EXPERTISE

Ian has extensive experience overseeing complex procurements for a variety of Commonwealth, State and Local Government entities as well as State-owned corporations and private sector clients.

Ian has also specialised in procurement advisory services, including probity, and has been engaged to oversee some of Tasmania's largest infrastructure and services projects.

The projects have included numerous multi-million contracts as well as several projects involving two-stage processes covering a range of contracting models including lump sum, D&C, DCBM, Managing Contractor and Early Contractor Involvement (ECI).

In addition, to his probity credentials, Ian has over 40 years of expertise in Information Systems and has extensive experience in advising on acquisition of computer systems including computing needs and cost/benefit analyses, preparation of specifications, evaluation and selection and contract negotiation.

Several major probity engagements such as the Tasmanian Prison Infrastructure Redevelopment, Hagley-Westbury Bypass, State Road Maintenance and Brighton Bypass Project ECI contracts have involved oversight of contractual negotiations to ensure scope changes contrary to the tender process did not occur.
